The Communist Party, the statement said, had "grossly exaggerated the dangers of deviation." Insistence on continuation of political life through the creation of a United National Front had led to differences with the "highest authorities" and other national forces.

The presentation to the masses of the Party's policy of participation in the Government had caused a "negative reaction," the statement added. All this was due to a wrong assessment of the nature of the "highest authorities" and national forces which "proved capable of defending the Republic."

The statement condemned "murders, mutilations, torture, pillage and trespassing perpetrated by a mistaken upsurge of the masses who were afraid to love what they had gained."

WARSAW (Reuter). — The U.S. Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon, held a marathon five-and-a-haif hour conference with Polish political leaders here on Monday after being acclaimed earlier by several thousand wildly-cheering citizens at the Warsaw Cenotaph.

Diplomatic quarters in Western capitals hailed the announcement of the Eisenhower-Khrushchev exchange visits on Monday. It was predicted by Big Four conference quarters in Geneva that it will postpone for several months at least any new flareup of the Berlin crisis.

Mr. Nixon, fresh from an unexpectedly enthusiastic welcome from the Polish people on Sunday, capped a heavy official schedule yesterday with talks with Mr. Wladyalaw Gomulka, Communist Party Chief, Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz, and Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki.

As he emerged from the Cabinet building, the American statesman told reporters there had been full and frank discussions of bilateral questions — and some international problems as well. "In view of the amount of time (taken), you can assume we covered a great number of subjects," he said.

At the Cenotaph some time lager several thousand persons watched quietly as Mr. Nixon placed a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Warrior, and then were suddenly sparked into life when an onlooker yelled out in Polish in a strong voice: "Niech zyje Prezydent U.S.A." (Long Live the U.S. President).

The French in Geneva, originally cool and sceptical about the value of such personal meetings, also expressed satisfaction. They said that serious negotiations on specific issues are not likely during either the Khrushchev or Eisenhower trips, and that for this reason their objections to a summit meeting would not apply in this case. In Bonn, an official spokesman said the West German Government hopes world tension can be relieved and that "there is at the moment no cause to regard Mr. Khrushchev's visit with mistrust."

Mr. Zillist said that further encouragement by the Treasury could create considerable new financial reserves, which would be available for longiter ments and more than offset any temporary losses incurred by the income tax authorities.

Interest Revived

Local citizens had gradually lost their faith in life-insurance, due to the constant devaluation of their investments as a result of inflation. The introduction of the linked policies had, however, revived interest, and led to new investments totalling IL56m, during the past two years. Sixty per cent of the new policies are linked to the index, indicating that many of the investors were among the smaller and medium income bracket groups, Mr. Zillist said.

Nation's Character is Prime issue of the Future — Eban

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The issue confronting Israel in the next decade is not survival — that has been assured—but the future character of the nation, Mr. Abba Eban said in Jerusalem on Monday.

not survival — that has been assured—but the future character of the nation, Mr. Abba Eban said in Jerusalem on Monday.

Addressing a rally of young visitors from abroad, he called on them to make their own contribution and not to "linger over this country's past—achievements." Israel, he said is growing yearly, not only in population, but also in strength and in the degree of cohesion between its divergent inhabitants.

Referring to the repeated threats by the "Great Orator of the Nile" to "drive Israel into the sea," Mr. Eban said: "We have heard that General Nasser achieved greal into the sea," Mr. Eban said: "We have heard that General Nasser achieved greal into the sea," Mr. Eban said: "We have heard that General Nasser achieved great victories in the Sinal Campaign — I am prepared to let him enjoy similar victories in the future. Eban added.

Mr. Eban said that great profess had been made in solating hostility to Israel. The doctrine of non-recognition had been banished from the thoughts of the realistic nations of the world. "Let us, therefore, be patient with Arab-Israel relations, and contident that international law and opinion will perforce awaken in our neighbours a will to cooperation."

Peering into the feture, Mr. Eban asked: "What will be the character of the nations and its standard of culture—will it continue the Jewish tradition of uniting Western technology with the ancient Jowish heritage, or become a Levantine community assimilated to the standards of her neighbours?" This great issue has not yet been decided. "You cannot evade it alone," Mr. Eban told his young sudience.

Water Bill Passed

To Ban Swim Suits

A private member's bill which would prohibit the wearing of bathing suits on the streets was defeated in the Knesset last night, after being supported only by the religious parties.

Submitted by Mr. S. Y. Gross (Agudat Yisrael), the bill would also have forbidden women from appearing in public places (including buses and shops) in shorts or with uncovered back England and Switzerland have laws of this kind, Mr. Gross claimed.

Mr. Peretz Naphtall, Acting Minister of Justice, said in his reply that the wearing of shorts or of bathing suits was a matter of taste. To the extent that the degree of exposure was clearly offensive to public morals, the Criminal Code provided adequate sanction, he said.

National Land Bills Presented To Knesset for First Reading

The principle that has guided the Jewish National Fund—that land redeemed by it shall never be permanently sold—will apply to all nationally owned land under three bills presented for their first reading yesterday by Finance Minister Levi Eshkol. The bills are: a Basic Law on the Nation's Lands Bill, and the Management of the Nation's Lands Bill.

Debate on the measures was deferred until today, and it is likely that agreement was deferred until today, and it is likely that agreement own desolation—took on added importance, Mr. Eshkol said.

He noted that the J.N.F.

Eshkol said.

He noted that the JNF. has reclaimed 250,000 dunams of desolate land, making its ultable for cultivation; drained and settled 250,000 dunams of swamp land; and planted 40 million trees on 150,000 dunams in hill country, on sand dunes and in wesdis.

than that a regular debate be held. Mr. Eshkol said that most of the land in Israel belongs either to the State or to the Jewish National Fund. This has led to some duplication in various aspects of land management — leasing, exploitation, amelioration, afforestation, and development work. With a view to eliminating such duplication, the Prime Minister in July 1957 appointed a committee to Weitz Appointment Denied by J.N.F.
